

[00] 送 SIMPLY A GIFT

THE TEMPLATE IS YOURS. FREE.

The tousimparfaits.com rebuild you just walked through, the sixty logo routes next door, the nine-language translation: it's free. No license, nothing expected back. Keep it, trash it, slice it into a Shopify theme — it's yours.

The rest of this page is short: who I am, why I did it, exactly what's in the box — and what I could possibly help with, with its limits stated plainly.

FREE REBUILD

NOTHING EXPECTED IN RETURN

OPEN SOURCE, MIT LICENSE

[01] 私 WHO I AM

AN ENTREPRENEUR WHO LIKES TO TINKER WITH WEBSITES.

Paul, in his thirties, internet entrepreneur between New York and Lisbon. I build my own products — an eSIM carrier, a news app — and I advise on two subjects: cybersecurity and applied AI.

As a hobby, here is what I can do with my own hands: sites and apps that convert, automations that hold up over time, databases and team workflows, and audits that find what is about to break before it breaks.

With my teams at megastack.sh and calliope.agency, we ended up building our own agents for branding, web design and web app development. They already run on my own companies — Openline, cupof.news — and on our clients' projects. What you have in front of you came out of that.

→ paulfleury.com · linkedin.com/in/paulfxyz · hello@paulfleury.com

[02] 不完全 WHY YOU

BECAUSE I'VE BEEN FOLLOWING YOU FOR A LONG TIME.

In the spring of 2020, within a few months, I lost my mentor and then my father — and the world came to a halt on top of it. I spent a lot of time on the internet that year. Your videos were part of it, and they stayed.

Since then I've watched what came next take shape: the teams following one another, the formats finding their footing, the company growing without ever losing its tone. Right up to everything there is today, Odyssée included.

Then I saw the video where you explain that Tous Imparfaits has to be started over, that the branding isn't keeping up, that no logo works across the whole range. I did what I know how to do, instead of leaving a comment.

There's nothing to give back. It's a gift in the plain sense of the word: if it's useful to you, so much the better; if it isn't, it wasn't much to give.

[03] 送 WHAT'S YOURS

THREE DELIVERABLES, ALL OF IT YOURS.

What exists today, online, usable as is or in pieces. It's a static demo, and it says so — the exact scope is spelled out just below.

01 — THE LANDING PAGE

The full rebuild

A single static page built to convert: hero, tiered offers, 7 collections, 8 products, featured universes, shop-the-look, Mystery Pack, collaborations, community, FAQ, newsletter. Cart and checkout simulated client-side.

- HTML / CSS / JS with no dependencies
- Ready to cut into a Shopify theme
- Copy, prices and visuals taken from your site

02 — THE BRAND

Sixty logo routes

Thirty for "Tous Imparfaits", thirty for "Imparfaits", each delivered as a full logo, a favicon from 16 to 48 px, an app icon on three backgrounds and a browser tab. Including the written call: IM / PARFAITS.

- Pure SVG, a single accent colour
- Tested at real browser-tab size
- Designed for embroidery and stamping

03 — GOING INTERNATIONAL

Nine languages, live

French, English, Japanese, Chinese, Korean, Spanish, German, Dutch, Italian. Instant switching with no reload, cart and checkout included. Browser language detected on the first visit.

Shipping is limited to France, and that's fair enough: we're not touching the euros or the stated scope. But people discover and follow a brand long before they can order from it — the day you do open up, the interface won't have any catching up to do.

- ≈ 770 strings per language
- Titles and metadata translated too
- Proper nouns and prices protected

限 What this showcase is, and what it isn't

No judgment on the current site: it works, it sells, it has a personality, and there's real work behind it — this isn't a rebuild as a verdict. It's one proposal among other possible ones, to take or to leave.

Let's be clear right away: what you're looking at is a static showcase, made to show the potential of the journey — not a production site. Nothing is connected to real stock, real payments or real orders.

THREE VIEWS, BUILT END TO END

- The landing page — hero, tiered offers, collections, universes, shop-the-look, social proof, FAQ, newsletter
- The product page — gallery, sizes, size guide, stock, shipping, add to cart
- Cart and payment — cart drawer, gift tiers, checkout and payment methods framed to build trust

Simulated in the browser: the cart lives in memory, no transaction is possible.

WHAT ISN'T BUILT YET

- Category pages and filterable listings (size, color, universe, availability)
- Search, sorting, pagination, collaboration pages
- Customer accounts, order tracking, returns, wishlist
- Legal and editorial pages, the blog, campaign pages

All these views would come out of the same system: the grid, the typography and the components already exist.

Why this gift? Lately I've been training AI models on web design and branding. I took the chance to do a little run for you guys — free of charge.

Everything is on GitHub, in public

The three deliverables, the full code, the nine translation dictionaries and the manifest tracing where every asset comes from. MIT license: clone it, cut it up, resell it, no permission needed. No dependencies, no build step — a static server and it's live.

Don't want to deal with git? Download the site archive — the three pages, the fonts, the images and the nine dictionaries, ready to open locally.

The product photographs and the logo remain your property — they're here to show the rebuild on your real content, and I'll take them down on request.

[04] 道 ROADMAP

WHAT'S LEFT TODO.

The template stops where yours begins. Here are the four steps that follow, in increasing order of commitment — and of independence regained.

A Finish the remaining views

The screens still missing for an end-to-end journey: categories, filterable listings, search, customer account, order tracking. Same grid, same typography, same conversion logic as what already exists.

B Cut it into a Shopify theme

The template turned into a clean theme: editable sections, reusable blocks, native cart and checkout, metafields for collections and gift tiers. Delivered ready to publish — the natural extension of what's already here.

C Host the storefront yourself, keep Shopify through the API only

The site moves to your own hosting: faster, no theme to maintain, no template constraints. Shopify shrinks to a backoffice called through the API — catalogue, stock, orders, payments — while the display, the content and the views are entirely yours.

D Then drop it altogether

The logical next step, if the urge comes: Stripe directly (Apple Pay, Google Pay, PayPal, SEPA, taxes), an in-house database for catalogue, stock, orders and customers, a clean API, and self-hosted automations. No subscription, no theme commission, the data stays home.

[05] 技 A HAND, IF YOU NEED ONE

I'm around if you need advice, a technical opinion or a second pair of eyes on what comes next. And if one day you'd like me to actually get my hands on one of those steps, let's talk — no strings, at your own pace.

AND THAT'S IT

IM/PARFAITS

Nobody is perfect. It's been written on your clothes since 2021, and that's exactly why this work was easy to start. Good luck to the whole team.

— Paul, in Lisbon, for Tous Imparfaits.

THE SUMMARY IN ONE LINE

The rebuild is a gift, with nothing expected in return. As for the rest, my door is open whenever you feel like talking about it.

THE DELIVERABLES

The tousimparfaits.com rebuild

The 60 logo routes

The source code on Git Hub — MIT

Download the site as a .zip

hello@paulfleury.com

ME

paulfleury.com

linkedin.com/in/paulfxyz

github.com/paulfxyz

openline.com · cupof.news

Personal page by Paul Fleury, not affiliated with Ici Japon Corpor Tous Imparfais, and not sponsored. The deliverables shown are working concepts built from public content on tousimparfaits.com. Openline and cupof.news are my own companies.